Wilmington's Keogan fights bottle battle

by Jeff Nazzaro

Wilmington Redemption Center owner Tom Keogan is upset over what he feels is a beer and softdrink distributors' effort to put redemption centers out of business. Keogan now delivers most of the returnable bottles and cans he receives and has been forced to limit his own pick-ups and close his center on certain days.

"[The distributors] want us out of business. For each container they do not get back is two-and-one-quarter cents in their pocket."

"Stores such as Market Basket have [redeemable bottles and cans] picked-up. Redemption centers are discriminated against because we don't sell [distributors' and wholesalers'] products. They put the product out, they should pick it up. It's the law in Maine," asserts Keogan, who had a bill proposed in the state legislature by Representative Jim Miceli (D-Wilmington) which would require distributors to pick-up containers from products they sell from redemption centers.

A portion of the current law states that retailers are only required to accept 120 returnable bottles or cans per consumer, per day, a limit enforced at Wilmington Market Basket. Redemption centers do not impose limits.

Redemption centers offer consumers a convenient location to dispose of all returnable containers, Keogan maintains.

In an important ruling approximately one year ago, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts won the right to the five cent deposit from all unreturned beverage containers. Previously, distributors and wholesalers kept unclaimed deposits.

Shortly thereafter, Keogan began receiving indications from distributors that they would no longer pick-up his containers. This action has forced redemption center owners to pay extra shipping costs.

Keogan feels that private companies, such as Clean Environment Co. of Billerica, should pay redemption centers an increase, from the two and one-quarter cents per returnable they are paying now, in lieu of the fact they are not picking up the items from the centers. The fee was raised recently from two cents to the current two and one quarter cents.

But, Clean Environment President Martin Shapiro sees things differently.

"Many of the redemption centers from which we get goods are basically dishonest," Shapiro asserts, citing alleged "short-changed" bags of cans which cost the state and the wholesalers money - a loss passed on to the consumer, according to Shapiro. Clean Environment is a limited partnership owned in part by beer distributors, including Richard Tatleman, President and General Manager of Merrimack Valley Distributing Company, of Danvers.

"Clean Environment represents a number of soft drink bottlers and malt beverage distributors. We process 22 million cases of beverage containers per year. We pick-up more than is brought in to us by redemption centers," Shapiro said.

Clean Environment operates by paying redemption centers and retailers the five cent deposit plus two and one quarter cents per can or bottle for handling and then selling the salvaged glass and aluminum. The wholesalers then get a large percentage of the salvage value, according to Tatleman.

The bottle bill "is a very expensive system," said Tatleman, who favors beverage containers being included in a comprehensive, state-mandated curbside recycling program.

Distributors "invested their money [in Clean Environment] to reduce the costs for administration of the bottle bill," Shapiro stated.

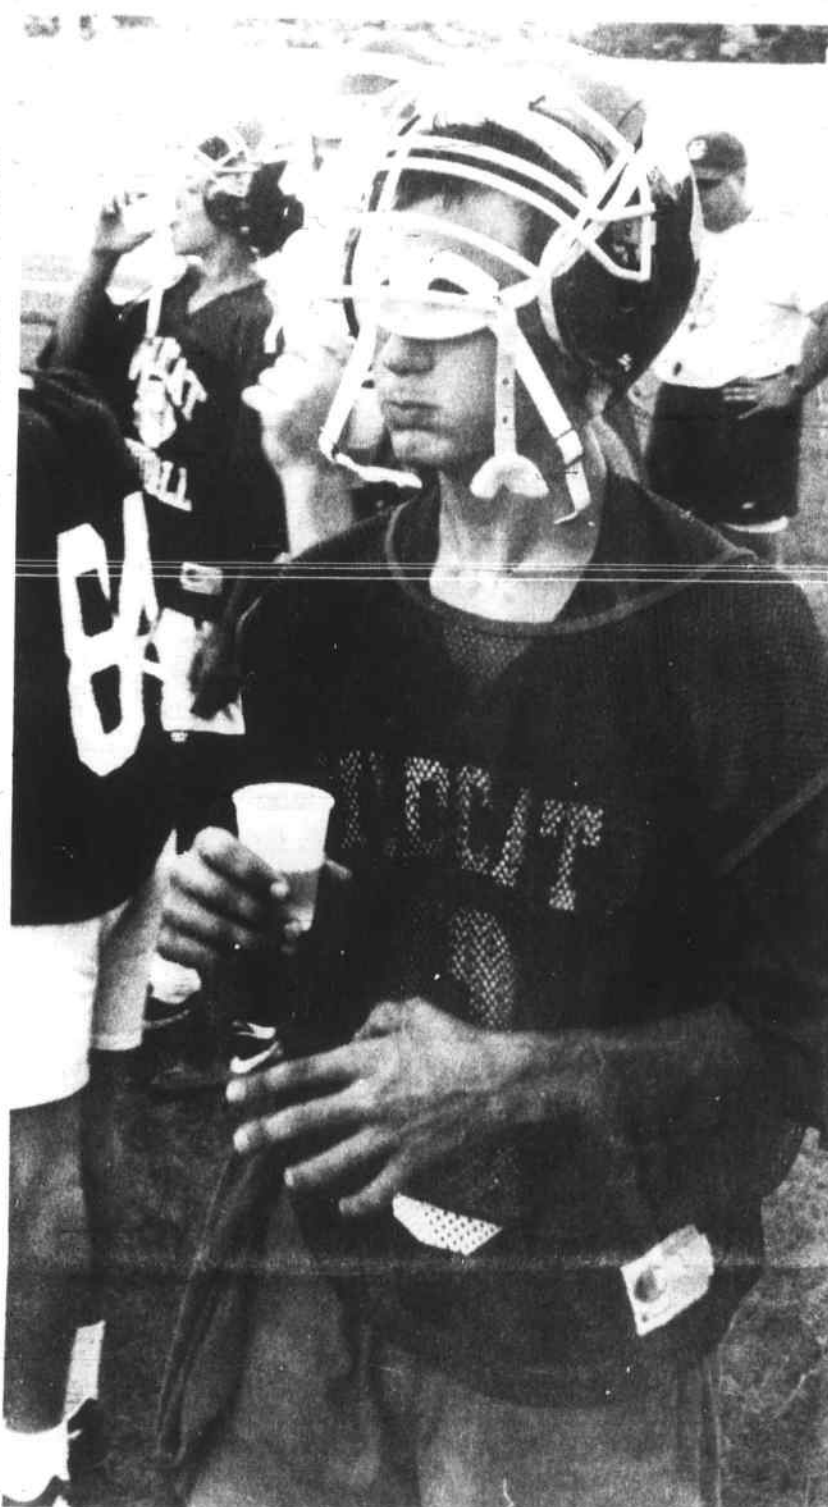

Representative Miceli is currently "trying to get the Chair [of the House Energy Committee Al Herron] to discharge House Bill 862 to the floor for debate."

"If [distributors and wholesalers] are not complying, then we're going to take some more dramatic action."

"[Keogan] has got a business in my district and I'm going to try and help him out," Miceli stated.

"There's a big profit being made somewhere," Market Basket Front End Manager Jim Netto said of the bottle bill.

That profit is distributed between the state, which receives a calculated monthly amount for unredeemed containers from distributors; the distributors themselves, who sell the salvaged materials; and redemption centers and retailers that receive the two and one quarter cent handling fee less collection expenses. Distributors save the handling fee on all containers not returned

The path of the Wilmington Legion Post

by Capt. Larz Neilson

The land on which the Wilmington American Legion Hall used to stand on Middlesex Avenue at the corner of Adams Street once upon a time belonged to the Rev. Isaac Morrill, a man who was minister of the Congregational Church for about half a century. His home still exists, near the brook on Middlesex Avenue.

Susan, granddaughter to the Rev. Isaac, married a man named Cyrus Adams in 1848. Cyrus built a place at the corner of the present Adams Street and Middlesex Avenue, where he made wooden pumps, probably the first "manufactured" produce in Wilmington. One of those pumps may be seen, in a picture in the Hamden Tavern.

Adams, it seems, continued to make pumps for about 20 years. Eventually he was put out of business when the cast iron pump was invented.

About 1861 a "select school" was started in the basement of the town meeting house (Congregational Church). That meant that another place had to be found, on occasion, for town meetings. On some occasions they were held in the Adams House. Corporal Levi Smith, of the 51st Massachusetts Volunteers was also the town constable. On at least one occasion he called for a town meeting in the Adams House.

When the meeting house burned in 1864 another site had to be chosen. More than a few town meetings were held in the Adams House.

One of the problems after the Civil War was to find a method of stopping a train promptly. All trains depended on brakemen, men who turned the brakes by hand, and then went on to the next car where he repeated the process.

George Westinghouse was the railroad conductor who invented air brakes. He is supposed to have been a visitor to the Adams Pump factory. Did George Westinghouse learn anything about air brakes on the visit he is supposed to have made?

There is no answer. About the time of the Spanish American War a four family apartment house was on that site. All four apartments, each with two floors, faced on Adams Street. Mr. and Mrs. Cady, shortly after they were married in 1900, occupied one of those apartments.

It was about 1925 that the Catholic Club purchased the building. The club, as may be guessed, originated in St. Thomas Church. The members had a lively organization. There was always a play, or a musical being planned.

It was after the Catholic Club lost interest in the building that it was purchased by the Wilmington Post, American Legion. The Post had been meeting in the Wilmington Town Hall, and it is said there was no room for even a selectman, in those days.

When the members of the Wilmington Post 136 saw the opportunity they moved quickly. The hall was destroyed in a fire in February 1987. The Post purchased the old Maple Meadow School, a "portable" school, which Wilmington had been using in the 1930's. That today is where the Legion is meeting.

Jean Morrison NEMH employee of the month

Wilmington resident Jean Morrison has been named New England Memorial Hospital Employee of the Month. Morrison is an administrative secretary for the hospital's public relations department.

At a recent noontime ceremony honoring her at the hospital were two special guests: Cuban natives Alexis Abrahantes Carrallero and his mother, Xiomara, joined the festivities to express their heartfelt thanks for Morrison's determined effort over a nine month period to bring Alexis to the United States for medical treatment of burns suffered in a kitchen accident.

Morrison was there at Logan Airport to greet Alexis as he arrived in the United States. "When he stepped off the plane, it was the greatest feeling I have had in my life," she said.

I have been personally touched by all of Jean's efforts to bring Alexis out of Cuba and have him treated here," said hospital President Frank J. Perez. "It would not have been possible without Jean's diligent, relentless pursuit."

Alexis agreed. After the ceremony Alexis threw his arms around Morrison, who he calls his "grandmother," and said, "I love you."

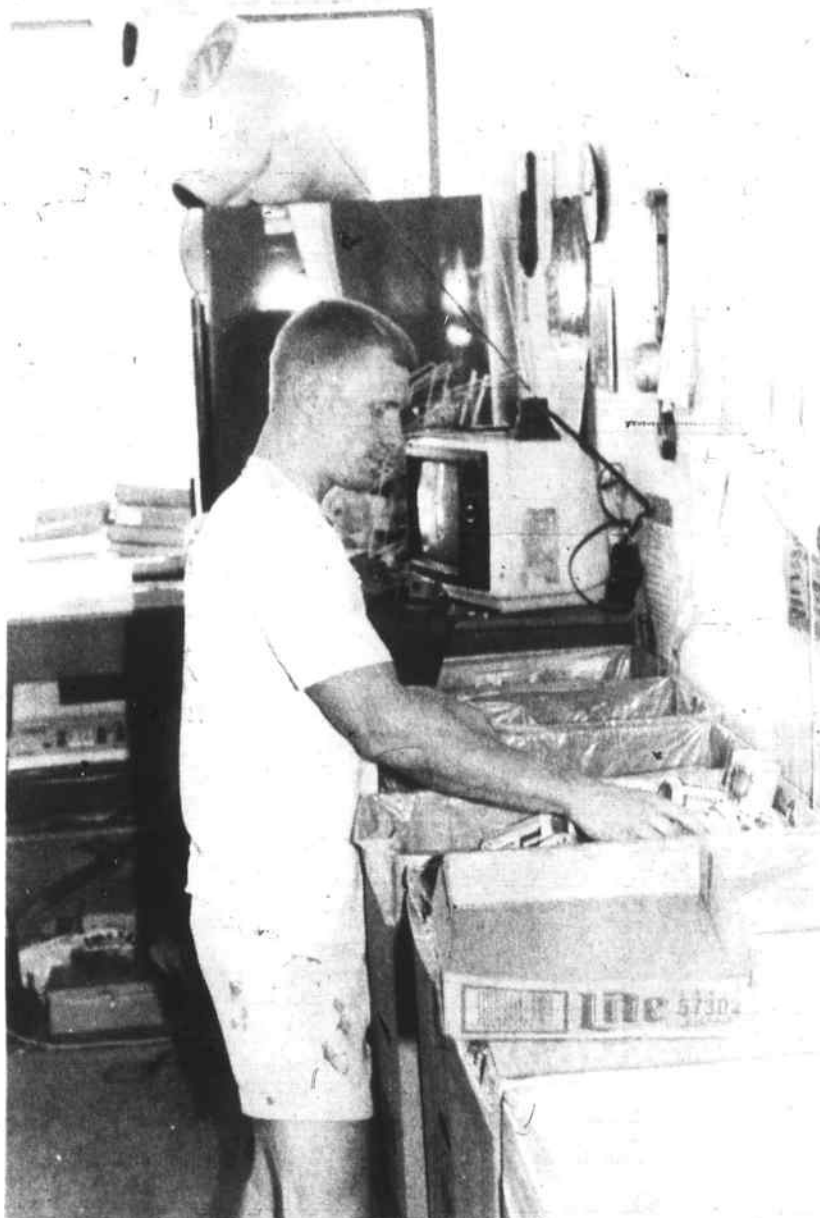

This is just one example of the energy, commitment, and "heart" Morrison brings to her job in public relations every day. "Jean has been the kind of employee whose always willing to go the extra mile to do what needs to be done," said Vice President for Community Services, Jim Londis.

Morrison contributes to the community in many ways. A certified basic life support instructor, she has taught CPR through the hospital's health promotion classes for three years, and last year certified over 250 people. To reach out even further to the community, she will demonstrate CPR in NEMH's tent at Stoneham Town Day on September 18. Morrison has also served for three consecutive terms on the board of directors of Wilmington Access Cable Television.

Employee of the month

Morrison is congratulated by (l-r) Jim Londis, vice president for community affairs; Allen Shepherd, Jr., M.D., chief of surgery, Xiomara Carrallero and her son, Alexis; and Frank J. Perez, NEMH President.

Selectmen delay meeting until Thursday afternoon

by Jeff Nazzaro

The Wilmington Board of Selectmen's subcommittee meeting has been postponed from September 2 to Thursday, September 9.

"A conflict came up at the last minute," explained Selectman Diane Allan, who along with Selectman Gerald Duggan is investigating the water and sewer department through the subcommittee.

"The meeting will basically be a working session where we will ask the town manager questions from the materials that we've requested and then form a report for the board of selectmen based on our conclusions and recommendations," Allan said.

BUY A CAR, LEASE A CAR?

There was a time not too long ago that car buyers could deduct the steep interest they paid on car loans and leasing only made sense for business and professional people who could write off the cost, subject to certain limitations.

Today, leasing is far more popular for everyone; one in four new cars will be leased rather than bought this year. For those people who are used to trading in one car for another before the first one is wholly theirs, leasing looks good. Down payments are minimal and the monthly fee is lower; lessees can either spend less or trade up to a fancier car. But if you normally pay off the car and then keep it for a few years free of debt, leasing is expensive because, at the end of the payments, at the end of the lease, you don't have a car.

A relatively new financing method for purchasing, balloon financing, makes buying more desirable and has many of the same financial advantages of leasing, plus ownership of your vehicle.

If leasing looks good to you, read the fine print. Be sure you understand the terms of the lease; the capitalized cost of the car, the residual value, the interest rate built in and the penalties for excess mileage, damage, or breaking the lease.

WHY HIGH AUTO PREMIUMS?

QUESTION: What is the biggest factor in the increase in auto insurance premiums over the years?

ANSWER: The cost of insuring your car has been rising along with the rising cost of labor and replacement parts that go into repairing your auto. Despite the well-known increase in medical and hospital costs, by far, the biggest factor in the increase in auto insurance is the cost of crash repair which is climbing twice as fast as bodily injury insurance.

Studies have shown that if a new car were totally wrecked, it would cost four times as much to repair it as you paid for it. Auto theft has also doubled in the past 10 years.

AUTO REPAIR COSTS are climbing twice as fast as bodily injury costs due to the high cost of repair.

letter to the editor

Health care providers can't control cost

Dear Larz:

With the Clinton administration's imminent health care reforms on everyone's mind now, we would like to share the following thoughts with your readers.

There is much confusion over the state of our health care system and why it needs reform. Not many persons understand the basic issues. First of all, it is not true that our health care system itself is deficient in any way. In fact, we have the best hospitals, laboratories, doctors, nurses, pharmacists and other health care personnel in the world. We are the world's largest manufacturers of pharmaceutical products. Research in our medical schools, hospitals and laboratories is of the highest caliber keeping us in the lead in the science of medicine. We are also the most health conscious people in the world. More and more people are exercising regularly. Cigarette smoking is on the decline and may disappear from the American scene in the foreseeable future. There is every reason to believe that the health of the average American is better than what it was two decades ago. What is wrong is the way our health care services are billed and paid for.

There are basically two types of health care services: The Health Maintenance Organizations (HMO's) and the Health Care Providers (HCP's). The HMO's are managed mostly by hospitals. You become a member of the HMO by paying a monthly fee and you are entitled to receive all the services they can provide for only nominal charges per visit. The HMO covers a number of area hospitals, a large number of doctors and specialists. This is a very satisfactory arrangement. The health care services as well as billing and accounting are managed by the same organization, thereby minimizing the costs. This arrangement also has the least chance of misuse and fraud. Undoubtedly, this is the way to go in the future. In fact, the best way is to let each hospital to have its own HMO with a large number of doctors and specialists in the area in a consulting capacity. In this way the hospital can meet all the needs of health care and still control the costs.

The HCP's, on the other hand, are purely business organizations operated primarily for the purpose of making a profit. Most HCP's are run by insurance companies who also provide auto, life and other insurance. These companies tried to apply the principles of auto and life insurance business to the health care business. Unfortunately the health care claims are considerably more in number than the auto and life insurance claims. The "law of averages" which gives the companies a handsome profit in auto and life insurance does not work very well in the health care business. Therefore, in order to increase their profits, the HCP's have increased their premiums, introduced "deductibles" and "coinsurance" and limited their services to selected facilities. In addition they have created a great confusion, lobbied and have done everything to cloud the issues.

The latest misleading concept introduced by the HCP's is "Managed Care." This is basically the same as the health care provided by the HMO's except that a greater portion of the cost is shifted onto the user. The HCP's say that they can get the best rates from doctors, hospitals and pharmacies. What they are actually doing is using their financial clout to pay the doctors, hospitals and pharmacies less than what they deserve, so that the profits remain with the HCP's. The members are asked to go to only those doctors and pharmacies with whom the HCP's have prior arrangements or struck deals. Only inexperienced doctors, less competent medical groups and faceless mail order pharmacies can give the HCP's the type of deals they are looking for. On one hand, there is a great emphasis on the quality of health care nationally. On the other hand, the HCP's go around bargaining with doctors and pharmacists for the lowest rates. The members have no say in this process. This, in our opinion, is highly unethical and unfair to the doctors, pharmacists and other health care professionals.

As regards health care costs, there is no reason to think that the HCP's can reduce the costs at all. There is a duplication of effort here. The health care is provided by one organization while billing, processing, paying and member services are provided by the HCP's. It must be remembered that the HCP's are not basic health care facilities but are just businesses who are in it for profit.

As regards the pharmacy services, despite the efforts of many companies to favor the mail order drug companies and large chains, Village Apothecary is doing fairly well and is continuing to provide the type of service that is expected from a community drug store. For this, we wish to thank the residents of Wilmington.

Sincerely

point of view

We're losing the war, so let's change sides

by Bill Conlon

The end of summer draws near, and so too does the end of the growing season. Tomatoes are ripening, eggplants are purple and drooping, and the marijuana is nearly ready to harvest.

Marijuana! Reefer! That illegal, deadly drug, devastator of our youth and wrecking ball of the inner city? Well, calm down a bit and let's discuss this slowly. Before you instinctively shout "NO!" to drugs, please hear this argument through.

Marijuana has adverse health affects. No question. Deliberately putting smoke into your lungs is assuredly unhealthy, and this is no ordinary smoke. But beyond the health risk, perhaps the worst side effect of marijuana is that it makes you go to jail.

Contrary to popular opinion, marijuana is not addictive. Tobacco and alcohol (drugs by any definition) cause physical addiction, but they are both legal. People with a lack of willpower might claim that marijuana is psychologically addictive, but there are people out there claiming to be addicted to sex, too. Marijuana does not physically addict, and if you can say NO to heroin now, marijuana will not lead you there. Daily pot smokers who stop cold suffer no screaming withdrawals, but just ask any former cigarette smoker how difficult it was to quit.

Alcohol and tobacco are intoxicants, drugs. (Non-smokers who doubt that tobacco is a drug should light up a cigarette some time.) Marijuana is also intoxicating, granted, but it carries stiff criminal penalties for simple possession. Why? What's the difference?

Prohibition -- nothing learned

The hard-earned lessons of Prohibition, sadly, have been lost. The complete prohibition of alcohol, the Great Experiment, was a dismal failure in America, but there are people today who would re-impose Prohibition, right now. The handwriting is on the wall in America for the outlawing of tobacco, too, perhaps by the end of this century. But the good-intentioned effort is wasted.

The argument for Prohibition was that average citizens are too irresponsible, to handle something so deadly as Demon Rum. For the public good, alcohol was banned. If alcohol, tobacco, aspirin or guns were invented this morning, they would undoubtedly be outlawed before supper was on the table tonight. Responsibility for our personal actions, and the American tradition of being able to self-destruct if you wish, are fast becoming extinct. It's sad.

Do you have enough mental stability to drink in moderation? Millions do. The law forbids drinking in public, prohibits driving after drinking, and bans the sale of alcohol to those under age 21. Fine. If those alcohol laws work, why not apply the same laws to reefer, straight across? Deter abuses, keep fools off the road, and teach kids to say no. Any harm would be self-inflicted. So?

Jobs and tax revenues

There are huge economic impacts to decriminalizing marijuana. Due to the tobacco industry, the large-scale growing of smoking materials is simple, and there are factories waiting to turn that harvest into cigarettes. That means lots of jobs. Produce it for 50 cents an ounce, slap on a $20 tax per ounce, and nobody would blink. The tax revenues would be boggling. The plant has other agricultural uses, too. Remember, cannabis is also called hemp.

The money spent on enforcement of the marijuana laws could be saved, or redirected toward truly dangerous things such as crack, heroin and murder. Those police helicopters hovering for hours in search of reefer patches have better things to do, and our scarce prison space could be housing the dangerous, not the harmless.

Instead, the "war on drugs" makes marijuana more expensive. The higher the cost, the more likely some honest citizen will be to risk everything for a winner-take-all dash across the border, and the more shots that will be fired on city streets over profits made from illegal drugs. Sounds like the Roaring 20s, doesn't it?

If you want celebrity endorsements for decriminalization, try Robert Parish of the Boston Celtics, who was hassled and fined for a few ounces. There are millions of other pot smokers out there, working daily at their jobs, quietly waiting for liberation.

What have we got to lose?

With an admitted toker in the White House (but he didn't inhale? yeah, sure) this is the best time in history to test decriminalization of marijuana in America. That's all -- just try it. If the results of legalization are devastating beyond belief, we can always return to our current, failed policies, but at least we can say we tried.

Congressman Meehan, care to make history in your first term?

McGonigle has earned the right to fight

by Kevin John Sowyrda

When Sheriff John McGonigle was re-elected to a six year term in November of last year he appeared to be at the pinnacle of his public service career. The stunning November landslide, which followed typically disorganized Republican opposition, proved McGonigle's reputation as an innovative administrator in a county government all-too-familiar with incompetent incumbents.

But the perception of McGonigle as the conscience of county government and one of the rising stars at the county seat in Cambridge has been severely tarnished by an ongoing corruption probe involving the sheriff's office.

Federal prosecutors alleging a kick-back scheme involving McGonigle and his lieutenants, whose high salaries have sparked headlines. This follows a previous investigation on charges that McGonigle has dished out no-show-jobs to political favorites.

The Boston Globe handed McGonigle a near fatal media blow last week, reporting that prosecutors have tape recorded the sheriff as he sought cash kick-backs from the Middlesex County civil deputies. McGonigle has denied any wrongdoing, and supporters maintain that he is being publicly maligned by disgruntled subordinates.

The sheriff's battle with prosecutors is ironic given his start in county government. A career probation officer, McGonigle was tapped by Governor Mike Dukakis to fill a vacancy in the sheriff's office following the death of Edward Henneberry. The selection of McGonigle angered more than a few Beacon Hill pols who had jockeyed for the coveted appointment, recognizing the power of the sheriff's post and the traditional strength of incumbency in the old-boy-network of county government.

McGonigle developed as a breed apart from the network. He went on to be elected by wide margins and has generally earned high marks and public praise for his innovative programming in the Billerica and Cambridge jails. Over the last five years McGonigle has upgraded the community service program, sending inmate crews to perform rehab work in the county's cities and towns. The sheriff is noted for a major expansion of substance abuse programs in the jails, increasing participation by inmates 10 fold.

Another irony is that McGonigle had begun his own investigation of the civil deputies office just prior to the federal government impounding their records. McGonigle has said he was moving toward reform, and supporters make the contention that prosecutors are receiving erroneous testimony from civil deputies who are angry with the sheriff.

But whether guilty or innocent, this investigation has helped trash McGonigle's career, perhaps forever. The lingering threat of indictment has created a firestorm of negative publicity which portrays the sheriff in a way many local political leaders believe does not match the personality of the man they know.

Wilmington Selectman Bob Cain has kept his hand in county politics for many years as an active member of the county advisory board, which serves as fiscal watchdog for the county government. Cain said the accusations against the sheriff don't match the man he's worked with. "The things that I hear certainly don't match. You can't relate it to the John McGonigle we know and work with," said Cain, who cited McGonigle for bringing county jail costs to a level four times lower than comparable systems in other counties. "I really believe that he is a good public servant," said Cain, who's worked closely with the sheriff as an advisory board member.

Whether it's John McGonigle or Dan Rostenkowski in Washington, no public official should have to tolerate the arrogant, snails' pace of grand juries, district attorneys and attorney generals.

If John McGonigle is guilty of a crime, then determine the evidence and present the indictment. If not, explain to us where McGonigle should go to reclaim his once-solid reputation.

Briefly in politics

I have learned that Governor William F. Weld is set to offer State Representative Rob Krekorian (R) the post of assistant secretary of public safety. Beacon Hill observers say Krekorian would assume the role of policy manager for the secretariat and would serve as number two man to public safety chief Thomas Rapone.

Krekorian confirmed recently that he had 'serious discussions' with the governor, Secretary Rapone and other senior staffers, but that "no firm offer has been received as of this time."

The Republican from Reading said if a formal offer came he would give it "serious consideration" and that the decision would be "a difficult one" since accepting the post would require Krekorian to resign his seat in the House.

Krekorian, an attorney at law and member of the House Criminal Justice Committee, has been active in juvenile crime legislation and is also an outspoken proponent of capital punishment. He was first elected to the House in 1990, succeeding Geoff Beckwith who now heads the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

Krekorian's district, which includes Wilmington's Precinct Six, Reading and North Reading, is considered Democratic turf, but is an area where voters have historically split their votes between Republican and Democratic candidates.

Should Krekorian resign, political observers believe local Democrats would be able to offer a strong slate of candidates if a special election were to be called. On the Republican side of the aisle, an early favorite would be Brad Jones, Krekorian's legislative aide who was recently elected to the North Reading Board of Selectmen.

If Krekorian leaves for public safety he will assume the office of Priscilla Douglas, who this week was sworn in as Governor Weld's new secretary of consumer affairs and is the one black in the Weld cabinet.

Who reads long letters?

Dear Larz:
Please note the Town Crier's invitation to express opinion with Letters to the Editor: "Limit five-hundred words or less (preferably shorter)." I agree. I write occasionally, with five hundred words or less (usually less) and try to score my point with a bit of stoic satire. Over the years I have acquired a good number of fans who "get it."

My letter of this week consisted of three sentences, making one stoic point with a touch of satire. My questions are: Doesn't any knowledgeable person proofread the typesetting? How come, the incorrect spelling, punctuation and sentence change in just 43 words, somewhat spoiling the thought? Also, 500 words or less? Read the "sermon" letter of this week. I wonder how many subscribers really read a long winded letter with close to 1000 words, and who proofreads these letters?

Sincerely,
The local Curmudgeon,
George L. Webster

Flaws for those who search

Dear Larz:
Although I address my remarks to you, I do hope they gain the attention of Mr. Webster.

Many years ago, a life long Wilmington resident, a gentleman named Ernest (Buster) Eames was serving as janitor of Wilmington's Congregational Church. One Sunday morning a woman approached him complaining about dust she found in one corner or another.

Mr. Eames replied "Mrs So and So, I make it a point to leave some dust in a few corners, so as not to disappoint those who go looking for it."

letter to the editor

Editors note: This was a letter that the Town Crier received that was in direct response to a letter to the editor that appeared on page two of last week's edition.

Dear Mr or Ms Cooke:

As the General Manager of Zeneca Resins, I was very concerned to read in the Wilmington Town Crier last week that you are losing sleep over our operation here on Main Street.

Your characterization of the incident indicates that perhaps you may have been influenced by one of the less factual and/or alarmist reports in the press. I'd like to take this opportunity to clarify the facts for you.

Neither Mr. or Ms. Cooke or any other Wilmington citizens were in danger on August 6, nor are you now. There was no fire. There was no explosion. Quite the contrary. The safety systems both within the plant and in coordination with the Wilmington Fire Department worked exactly as they were designed and expected to work: flawlessly. It was a textbook example of how an incident stayed minor.

Of course, as a precaution and as part of the planned and practiced safety procedures, a lot of fire department and other safety equipment turned out. Consequently, the incident perhaps appeared bigger to you than it was. Chief Daniel Stewart of the Wilmington Fire Department, or the Zeneca Community Advisory Panel would, I'm sure, be willing to vouch for this.

We are not newcomers to this community. This plant site was established in 1964 under the company's original name: Polyvinyl Chemical Industries. We have a long and proud record of responsibility within the community dating from those first days.

Zeneca Resins has invested over $6 million installing safety and environmental equipment, including advanced water treatment and air treatment systems. We have worked and continue to work closely with local, regional, state, and federal agencies and officials to assure that our exemplary health, safety and environmental record stays that way.

The Wilmington plant is not the sole focus of our manufacturing operations. In consideration of our neighbors' and our customers' needs, our capacity expansion has occurred elsewhere. We built a new plant in Indiana in 1987 and our expansion, to a large extent, has occurred there and at our other plant in California.

It bears noting, too, that our Wilmington site in the North American headquarters for the company and, as such close to 200 employees, including our senior managers and their staffs all work here. If there were any danger from fumes, chemicals, explosions, or fires, enlightened self interest dictates that none of us would work here.

Bear in mind, too, that if there were any imminent danger in this facility, not only would I not work on this site, but the Teamsters Union, which has 33 members on site, would not allow its workers to work here either. We are the ones who work every day in closest proximity to the manufacturing operation. You will find that we all are quite comfortable. You should be comfortable too.

Mr. or Ms. Cooke, you and any other concerned neighbors for that matter are always welcome to visit our plant to see for yourself. Please call me at 658-6600 anytime, and I will be delighted to personally conduct you on a plant tour, and answer any questions you may have about our health, safety and environmental record.

Sincerely,
Dr. Robert A. Krueger

Secretary Pedula has accepted this invitation and will arrive at the complex at 9:30 a.m. The visit has

Although when questioned, she admits that classes did run through July, and, yes, it's now August and she's working on a number with one of her dance groups, and accepting registrations, and planning her Fall classes, and... So much for vacations! Actually, during her "vacation," Cindy did some performing herself, got some new ideas, and started preparing for the 1993-4 season.

Broadway Dance Academy offers classes, for children and adults, in a wide range of dance, exercise and gymnastics programs, including Street Funk, Jazz, Ballet/Pointe, Tap, and Preschool Creative Movement. Their staff consists of five teachers, in addition to Cindy, as well as three assistants. All the staff members are experts in their fields, and strive to make the dance experience a rewarding one for all students.

If something sounds too good to be true, it usually is...but, not this time. Welcome to Earring Dynamics Etc.!

This shop is Jennifer Braisted's latest entrepreneurial venture, although she's no stranger to the jewelry business. Ten years ago she owned six shops in Maine.

What's so special about Earrings Dynamics? "Women can come in and afford this stuff," says Jennifer. "I go to New York and do all my own buying, name brand overstocks, odd lots, some one of a kind pieces...really beautiful jewelry." The best part is, she sells everything for 50 to 75 percent below the retail price!

Wilmington prepares "job center" startup

by Jeff Nazzaro

The Town of Wilmington's Small Cities Employment Assistance Program is filing a grant application in the hopes of adding a fax machine, computers and phones toward completion of a "job center," according to Small Cities Job Developer Cathy Beyer.

The plan was announced Monday at the group's meeting at the town hall. The meeting was highlighted by an address from Millipore Corp. Human Resources Director Bill Emund aimed at improving job-hunters' application and interviewing skills.

Millipore Corp., which currently has 75 job openings for a variety of positions at its Bedford and Milford facilities, uses computers to scan all incoming resumes, of which they receive approximately 20,000 a year. The computer is trained to pick out key words and match qualifications with job descriptions. The focus of Emund's speech was how to best prepare a resume for this process. He also offered techniques for better interviewing once a candidate's resume is selected.

The Small Cities Employment Assistance Program also provides, for qualified Wilmington residents, employment workshops, job listings, job search support, agency referrals and career assessment; and, if Cathy Beyer gets her wish, a complete community job search center.

MD Telethon set record

The September 7 edition of the Town Crier of Tewksbury noted that:

Armed with complaints signed by Health Inspector William McMenimen, alternate building inspector George Nutall, Town Counsel Charles Zaroulis told selectmen he would seek a Cambridge Superior Court restraining order late that week to prevent further dumping on a Kernwood Avenue vacant lot owned by George Morgan.

Little Mr. Tewksbury, Brian Robillard and Little Miss Tewksbury Dina Fitzgerald were pictured displaying their plaques awarded during celebration held over Labor Day weekend.

A spirited discussion was going on between numerous town boards attempting to determine just who owned the responsibility of picking up dead animals. After several "fruitless" meetings, Town Counsel Zaroulis suggested the town pass a bylaw at town meeting that would place the responsibility squarely in the hands of the board of health.

The Muscular Dystrophy Telethon at Oakdale Mall set new records in fundraising, having collected $30,500, an increase of $9000.

Towne Auto third baseman Gene Manley was pictured as he fired to first base for an out in the Tewksbury Softball League championship series. Towne Auto defeated the Miceli Club two games out of three for the championship.

A Cessna 172 single engine aircraft landed upsidedown at the Funland Arcade after several failed attempts to land at Tew-Mac. No injuries were reported.

Wendy's on Rt. 133?

A Wendy's fast-food restaurant is being proposed in Tewksbury, with a public hearing scheduled for September 13.

The planned restaurant would be located off Andover Street, beside the Susse Chalet motor lodge. The original plans for the Susse Chalet included a separate lot, sharing the same entrance off Route 133, and it has taken years for a tenant business to arrive.

Planning Director Sean Sullivan said there are 50 parking spaces set aside for the restaurant included in the 1.5 acre parcel, and 42 spaces would be required for a restaurant use on the site.

The public hearing will be held in the town hall auditorium.

Flea market to benefit Abbey

A flea market is planned on the town common on Saturday, September 25, to benefit Tewksbury Abbey in England.

Eleanor Corey of the Tewksbury Homecoming Committee said the flea market will be one of several fund-raisers in town, to help raise funds for renovation work on the 400-year-old church. Roof repairs are badly needed.

Corey said Mayor Stanley Greenland of Tewksbury, England, will be on hand, as will the vicar of the church.

Tewksbury Selectman recently sent a letter of invitation to Mayor Greenland, including a request for him to bring along his official robe of office. Selectmen said they had to formally ask permission for the mayor to bring the robe along.

Lynch sworn as postmaster

The September 5 1968 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Opening day for the schools went off without a tremor with 4720 students enrolled.

Alice Chisholm of Hopkins Street was scheduled to arrive in Czechoslovakia the previous week to take part in a geology conference involving students and professors from several dozen countries. She got only as far as London before the Russians and their allies poured their troops into the unhappy country.

The biggest crane in the world was pictured as it drove up Middlesex Avenue to its new home on Upton Court, property of the Baldwin Steel Erection Company. William Lynch of Dexter Avenue was sworn into office as Wilmington's new postmaster.

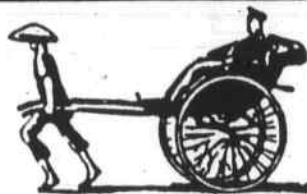

The name of Middlesex County National Bank was changed to Middlesex Bank, NA. The first outdoor sign was pictured being installed over the Everett office.

Jerry Rooney was pictured with his motorbike (Irish Rose) on which he rode around as he gave neighborhood youngsters a ride on his famous bike.

According to Nosey Nancy, Joe Balestrieri Jr. was promoted to PFC. and was stationed at Maguire Air Force Base in New Jersey; Brian McMahon of the 3525 Supply Squadron at Williams Air Force Base was chosen Airman of the Quarter; Pvt. Arthur Zaino of Linda Road was serving with the Army at Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Texas. Elia's Market advertised Tokay grapes, summer squash and carrots, all at 10 cents a pound; corn $2.49 a crate and cucumbers five for a quarter.

Lucci's offered center cut pork chops, 79 cents a pound; large cantaloupes, three for $1 and Sweetheart liquid dish detergent, four for 98 cents.

The final Concert on the Common, 1993

Blues no more

Bob and Karen McNaughton treated "Moody Blues" to a dish of ice cream at the last scheduled Tewksbury Concert on the Common on Sunday afternoon. A final concert was added to the agenda, however, with DJ Larry Gilbert on the slate for Friday, September 10, in an evening show. (Photos by Bill Conlon.)

Jazz bands play musical chairs over Sunday gig

by Bill Conlon

The last "official" Concert on the Common for 1993 was held Sunday in Tewksbury, but an additional night of entertainment is coming.

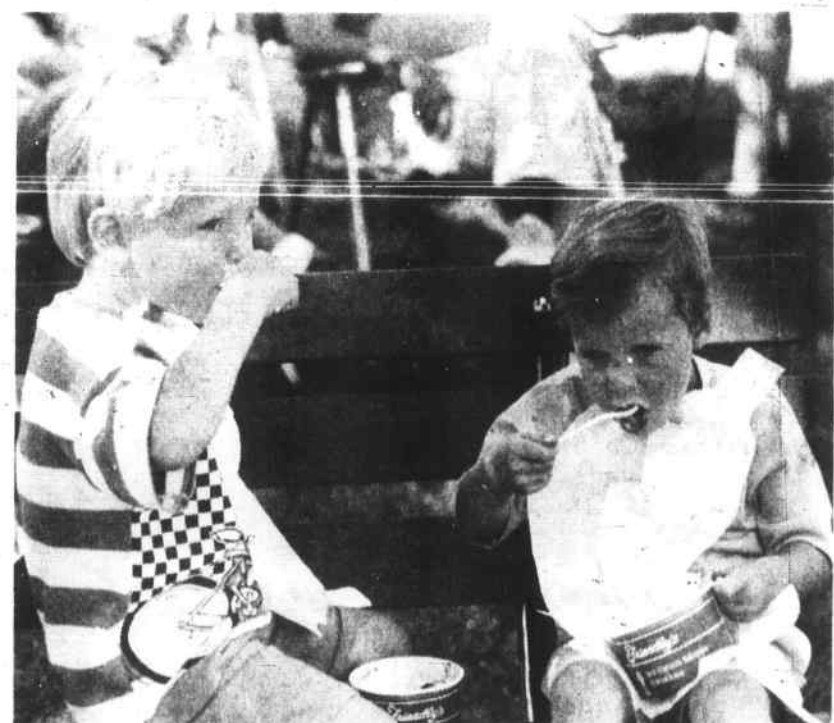

There was confusion about the musical guest on Sunday, and there was good reason.

Dr. Miller and his Miriachi Band was originally scheduled, but there was talk that the band accepted a gig with a cruise line, so they cancelled.

Next, the concert was supposed to be the M. Jamrog jazz band, but yet another cancellation was made.

Finally, Chris Humphrey and his friends accepted the Tewksbury gig and they appeared on Sunday. Chris said several band members had not played together before, so the band had no name. Humphrey suggested "the Chris Humphrey Quintet" but fellow band members hooted down the idea. So much for that plan.

A final "concert" on the common is planned for September 10, with an evening appearance by DJ Larry Gilbert and his Las Vegas show.

S'fine

Christopher Lorch, age 4, and John Tassinari, 3, had no complaints with the sundaes being sold by the Friends of the Library during the concert.

Chatting

Library Director Elisabeth Desmarais found the sale of drinks to be a little slow, so she passed the time of day with Congregational Minister Paul Millen.

Autograph?

Jazz musician Christ Humphrey was suprised when Daniel Hill asked him for his autograph during a band break at the Concert on the Common on Sunday, but he was happy to oblige. Humphrey said a couple of the band members had never played together prior to the Tewksbury concert, but nobody in the audience was able to tell by listening.

Work of Celia Cornish, art exhibition feature

Celia Marie Cornish of Wilmington, a black and white photographer from the New England School of Photography, will be exhibiting matted and framed limited editions of her recent work when Smart Resumes sponsors its newest art exhibition, entitled, "Bodily Desire & Interior Visions."

The exhibit will be dedicated to the works of undergraduate and graduate artists.

Ms. Cornish's work presents sensual "combine" images of one to four inch segments of the human body juxtaposed against other natural elements. The effects often startle the viewer by their seemingly explicit imagery and require additional analysis to understand their representations. Ms. Cornish forces the viewer into his or her own interpretation, often times offering no answer to the puzzle.

"Bodily Desire & Interior Visions" is showing from September 2 through October 29. Smart Resumes' hours are Monday-Friday 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday noon to 6 p.m.

All Around Travel Update

by Peggy Lee
President

MAKING CONNECTIONS THAT COUNT

Being well connected is never more important than when making travel plans. With the high tech state of the travel industry, a would be traveler going it alone is sure to miss out on some super deals and key regulation changes. That's where a good, seasoned travel agent can be invaluable. Linked via computer to the latest industry news and trends, a travel agent can plug you into little advertised special fares and package tours. An agent can also take the terror out of the fine print behind all those tickets, insurance policies, and accommodation plans. Best of all, a travel agent is one middleman whose services are free to the consumer; agents are paid directly by members of the travel industry.

In these days of extreme competition, the travel industry has become more and more complex. You as travelers have a tough job and ALL AROUND TRAVEL can make it easier for you. As travel consultants, our goal is to contribute what is needed in order to provide our clients with the best service & travel arrangements. And, our fully computerized agency puts us in the position of being able to do just that. Come see us Mon-Fri 9-5 and after hours by appointment, at 203 Jefferson Rd., No. Wilmington (Rt. 62). Ph: 658-2313.

HINT: A travel agent can customize your own tour package, including everything from airport transfers to dinner and dancing.

Three Sons Contracting finishes unbeaten

by James Pote

With two defeats of Rocco's in a week, Three Sons Contracting made it a perfect season with an 18-0 record in the Wilmington Over 35 Men's Softball League.

The first win came rather easily, as they defeated Rocco's by a score of 16-3.

Chuck Osgood and Artie Eibeau helped out with a four run first inning, with five hits between them and driving in a total of six teammates to take the early lead.

Three Sons continued their hot hitting with big hits from Barry Hanson and Bobby Butters in the slugfest.

In the second meeting between the two teams in less than a week, Three Sons took a scare this time from Richie Rappolli and Rocco's.

Rappoli started Rocco's off with a solo blast which took about two seconds to get out as he grabbed the top of the centerfield lightpole with his fourth tatter of the year.

But Rappoli was not finished yet, as he crushed yet another four bagger, but unfortunately that was not enough for him and his teammates as they fell to the potent offense of Three Sons by the score of 21-10.

But the undefeated team showed its power with a solo blast from pitcher Chuck Osgood and an inside the park homerun and two triples from Steve Brander. Bob Wilcox also contributed with three hits.

fly won it for Mac's as they continue to roll in the win column.

Rocco's 16

Charlie's Auto Body 7

Rocco's bats continued to see action as they took this one by a score of 16-7.

Mike Herra led the charge for Rocco's with four RBI's, while teammates Chuck and Mike Duggan had three hits apiece for the 7-9 Rocco's.

Kenny Chocola continued to knock in runners with three more teammates touching home plate on his account. Charlie's needed more than Chocola to win this one.

Shea's Concrete 27

Lions Club 14

The last place Shea's Concrete took a bite out of the Lions Club as they feasted off their pitching with 27 runs on 28 hits as they got their third win of the year and second versus the Lions Club.

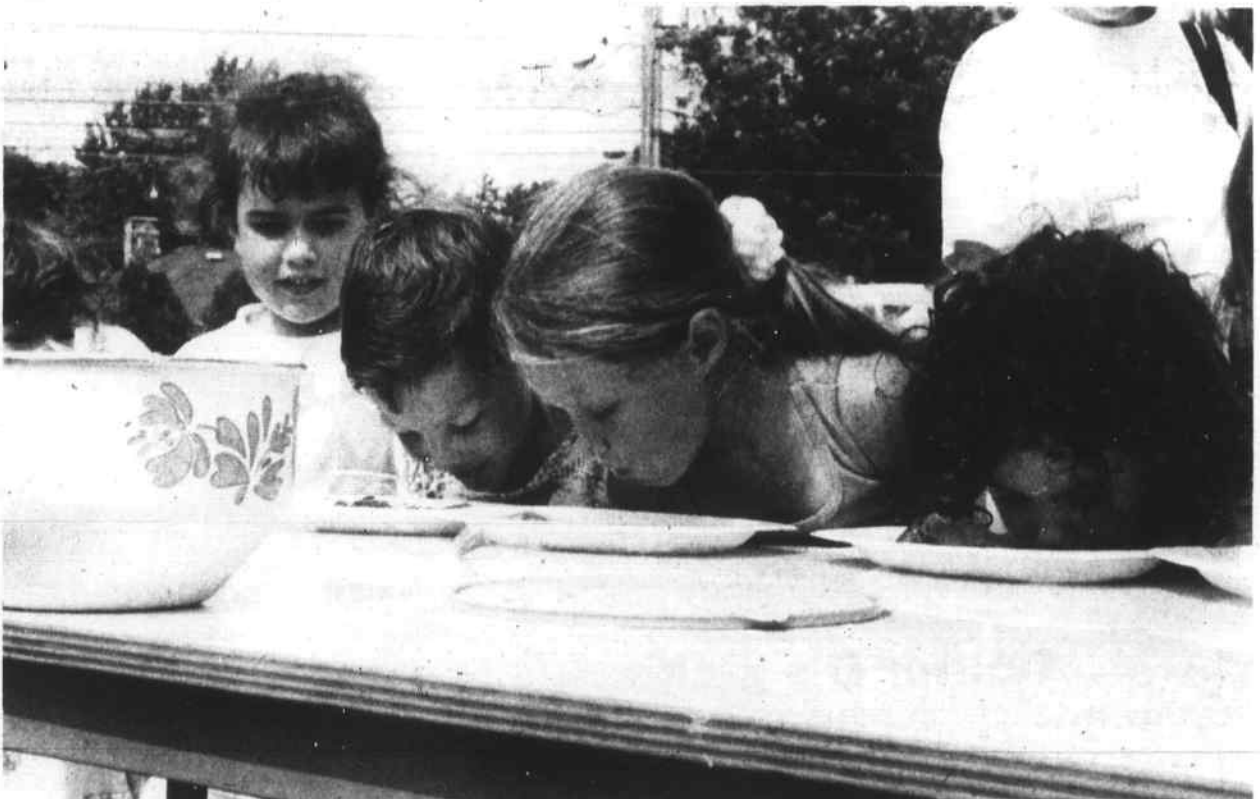

Bob Pierce and Bill Stratis each had inside the park homeruns, while Bobby Hoyer, Bobby Flores and John Pellerin each had three hits in this early ending mercy rule game.

Frank Riley tried to help his own cause with three hits, including an inside the park dinger and a two-run double.

Umpire marks 23 years of play

by Jeff Nazzaro

To say Tewksbury's Charlie Doherty has made some close calls in his life is to say that Nolan Ryan has thrown a few strikes. For the past 23 years, Doherty has been umpiring Little League Baseball games.

By the most conservative estimate in 23 years, at three games per week, Doherty would have signalled some 25,000 outs, looked at close to 35,000 pitches and said "play ball" over 700 times. That's a conservative estimate.

Doherty, who works as a special engineer, started in Little League as a manager and began umpiring a game a week in 1969. That figure quickly jumped to seven games a week. Although he admits to being "slower," Doherty still umpires a game a week with his partner, Paul Marchessault, also a longtime Little League Baseball umpire.

"I enjoy it," Doherty said of the perpetually thankless task of umpiring. "You have to do it because you like it."

The plight of the umpire, whether dealing with abusive fans, irate parents, disgruntled players or argumentative managers, from Little League to the Major Leagues is as much an American institution as the game of baseball itself.

But Doherty, who celebrated his birthday this week, has remained unrattled over the years by the unglamorous aspects of umpiring, instead focusing on the positive effects he had on two generations of Little Leaguers.

"I've had only a few arguments with players over the years and only ejected two in 23 years," Doherty remembered.

Of those who complain and hoot about his calls from the sidelines and bleachers, he "won't acknowledge at all."

"You turn it off," he said, "They're not part of my ballgame. I won't even look at it."

"Bang-bang plays," when the ball and player arrive to a base at the same time, Doherty insists, should be left "up to the umpire. In all the years I was coaching, I never came out [to argue with] an umpire," he said.

There is a still more prevalent, random and impersonal form of abuse an umpire must contend with: baseballs ricocheting, bouncing or hopping off the bat, the catcher or the ground and striking the umpire.

"I've been knocked down a couple of times, but I get back up," Doherty said, adding wistfully, "you get some good bruises, no question about it."

There also should be, according to Doherty, little question about any of the calls he's made or will make.

"I won't say every call I make is right, but I call it how I see it, and if I'm in position and I make the call, I don't want to hear too much from the manager," Doherty asserted.

Once, however, Doherty relied on an inside source in making a call.

"In a Senior League game I was umpiring by myself," Doherty recounts, "there were two men on, and the batter clocked the ball to left. Working alone you have to watch a lot, and the ball seemed to hit the top of the fence and roll under, so I signalled two bases. A fan indicated the ball hit a prong on top of the fence and dribbled over. I call what I see. I never let fans make a call for me, so I asked the left fielder, and he said it went over, so I signalled homerun."

Despite over 20 years of umpiring and only being able to do one game a week, Doherty said, "I still like it," indicating he will continue "as long as I'm able."

"I asked my partner [Marchessault], 'are we gonna retire?'" Doherty said before this season began, "and he said, 'Nah, we're gonna do it again.'"

Oh no! Not another "Drammie" award!

by Bill Conlon

Here comes an adventure that I'm nervous about, to say the least.

My brother, Kevin, just loves to go deep-sea fishing. Whenever he visits from Minnesota, where there is very little ocean, he books a trip to the sea.

Kevin is coming in this weekend, and he's outdone himself this time.

On Saturday morning, six of us will be in Galilee, Rhode Island, to board a 45-foot sportfisherman in pursuit of tuna.

But there are a few questions that I need answered first.

For example, how in the hell does one haul in a 400-pound bluefin? A five-pound largemouth gives me a game struggle, and I can just barely imagine what a quarter-ton fish on the line would be like to battle. In a word -- impossible.

Luckily I received a book a few years ago, titled "To Catch a Tuna." The book, published by MT Publications and distributed for early review by the members of New England Outdoor Writers Association, is quite a piece of work. The book details the lessons learned by a Connecticut sea captain who has chartered many a tuna trip for rookies like myself.

The book outlines the number of different tuna species, of which the giant bluefin is just the biggest of the brood. There are small bonito and albacore, and the "tuna" family includes yellowfin and bluefin, all of them edible.

Apparently, the tuna won't be too deep, preferring as they do shallow waters where the baitfish are thick. I've heard tales of huge bluefins skipping across the water, but I'll have to see.

According to Captain Anderson's book, the smaller tuna are caught on regular rods and reels, while the monsters require a fighting chair, and an hour of hard work cranking the reel handle.

Okay. An hour of pumping on a reel handle, trying to haul in a fish that outweighs my car. Right. I'm ready for that. Sure I am. All set.

The next question concerns the disposition of said fish.

For years we've all heard about the Japanese, and their appetite for tuna. Fish-buyers from the Land of the Rising Sun are said to pay up to $10 or $15 a pound for top-grade tuna, no questions, and a few taps on my trusty calculator shows that a 400-pound Charlie tuna at $15 a pound comes to $6,000. Oh really? Nice pay for an hour's worth of arm-breaking work, I'd say.

But others tell me that the charter boat skipper owns the prize. After all, it's his boat and his license that we're using to take tuna, and we're just paying for the thrill of sport-fishing. Hence, all the profits go to Herr Captain.

Hmmm. We'll have to discuss that one. It doesn't seem fair that we're paying for the privilege of earning him a few thousand bucks, does it?

As for bait, tackle, technique and tricks-of-the-trade, I'll trust to the crew for them. I don't own a tuna rod, if such a thing exists, and I'm dipped if I'd know where to pick up a bucket of butterfish for bait. That part of the experience is theirs to tell and mine to learn. We'll see.

But the final question, perhaps the most important of all, is the one I asked Kevin over the phone Friday, when he called to remind me about the fishing trip.

"Umm, Kevin ... what about the hurricane?"

To which his response, coming as it did from someone in Minnesota who doesn't watch Atlantic Ocean weather too closely, was:

"What hurricane?" Uh-oh.

Better than the Red Sox

Two anglers, out of five, scored on largemouth bass on Silver Lake last week, which is better than the Red Sox' batting average. Left to right are William Wilkins, Kelly Arsenault, Michael Wilkins, Stephen Biggins, Bobby French and Richard Byron. The bass weren't record breakers, but they were keepers.

A few of my beloved readers may remember a column that appeared in this space a few years ago, about a deep-sea jaunt out of Gloucester that I took with the Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club folks. Nice people, but a grim day to be at sea, with huge swells. This scribe spent part of the day over the rail, casting first his breakfast and eventually what felt like his socks, upon the gray sea.

The Great Hurricane

by Capt. Larz Neilson
Hurricane Emily provided some material for the local tv stations. Now it has come and gone. As was to be expected, it roared out into the North Atlantic.

There have been two hurricanes in New England history which were of real strength. One as in the 1600s, according to folklore. The other was in 1938, 55 years ago.

At that time this writer was second mate of a ship on the Pacific Ocean. Occasionally he would draw "weather charts," to show what was going on, in some place or other. The data came from the ship's radio operator, who listens to NAS, a naval radio station in Washington DC. The messages, of course, were in Morse code.

There was an interesting hurricane, off the shore of North Africa, in the fall of 1938. A radio commentator, Brook (or some such name) Carter told of it. Larz decided to "track" it by drawing charts.

Track it he did daily, until after it had passed Cape Hatteras, the eastern point of North Carolina. The customary course after passing that point is out over the North Atlantic. So Larz got lazy and drew no more charts.

Thirty-six hours later, or about that time, Mr. Carter had some extraordinary news. That 1938 hurricane had gone roaring across Long Island, and up across Connecticut and Massachusetts. The damage was terrific.

None of the present day commentators, those who spoke so learnedly about hurricanes had anything to say about that 1938 hurricane.

But it did earn the name of "Great."

obligation. The Weight Loss program will meet every Thursday from noon to 1 p.m. or 6:30 to 8 p.m. and will run from September 9 through November 18. Cost for the 10 week program is $85 for Y members and $125 for limited members. Discounts are available for friends or couples who join together.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A Message From High School Principal, Paul Fleming

by Jeff Nazzaro

Wilmington High School Principal Paul Fleming states positively that, "We're looking forward to a good year," beginning September 8 when students will begin classes in Wilmington.

In saying so, Fleming, who is beginning his tenth year as principal of Wilmington High School, points to the many successes achieved at WHS over the past year.

"I'm very happy with the athletic performance over last year," Fleming states in regards to the five major teams that made it to state tournament competition, including the WHS girl's division II State Softball Championship.

In addition, Fleming acknowledges the high school's "small but active [Technology Education] Department, responsible for constructing a solar car last semester, a project Fleming is "very excited about."

Fleming views Wilmington High School as a "comprehensive high school," that also offers a Fine Arts program. He is looking toward the development of interdisciplinary programs.

"We want to focus on that," Fleming says.

This goal will be eased with the addition of a Macintosh computer laboratory, a satellite dish and software hook-up, new high-tech programs held at the University of Massachusetts Lowell and the "pretty active peer leadership group," which, according to Fleming, "will enable students to solve problems through a mediation process."

The biggest change for the upcoming school year will be that provided by the newly passed education reform legislation, which, among other functions, will allow Fleming, as principal, to suspend or expel any student who assaults a faculty member or who is found with dangerous weapons or narcotics.

There will, in those cases, be an opportunity for a hearing and full due process of law will be granted.

"Expelled students can appeal to the superintendent," Fleming said.

Fleming also spoke of the new hazing law, which "requires every school to come up with a punishment for hazing violations."

"The new law," Fleming stated, "now pertains to any activity," with hazing punishable by "five days out-of-school suspension and dismissal from activity."

The high school itself is implementing a new policy designed to curb late withdrawals from courses. Now, any withdrawal after October 15 will result in a failing grade, subject to student appeal.

As the school adopts new policies and the legislature passes new bills, Fleming still recognizes the parents of the students as the most important outside influence.

"We're encouraging our faculty to affect the closest relationship they can with the parents in correcting any weaknesses [with their children's work] before we arrive at failure," he said.

"The strength of this school has been the support of the parents," Fleming proudly asserts; and cyclically, the high school is "a reflection of the homes we serve," Fleming maintains.

Education Reform Act Sets New Standards

by Bill Conlon
In June of 1993, after months of meetings, debates and wrangling, the Massachusetts legislature passed the Education Reform Act.

What is it? Good question. Many school and town administrators in Massachusetts are asking that very question. On August 18, attorney Naomi Stonberg gave an overview of the Education Reform Act to the Tewksbury School Committee, in part to clear some of the confusion surrounding the new law.

requires three years of consecutive service. Teacher status from other schools may be transferred.

A teacher may be dismissed by a principal for "just cause" and under standards for competency, capacity and conduct, among others. The teacher may request a review within 10 days, and appeals become a matter for arbitration, not for the courts. Teachers will be evaluated, using standards set by the school committee and the recommendation of the superintendent.

School committees have sharply reduced duties under the new law...

Administration
First off, the attorney said, the act deletes Chapter 71, Section 37 of the state laws, which placed school committees in charge of public schools. Under the current law, the school committee does everything from selecting new textbooks to the hiring of coaches. No more.

School committees have sharply reduced duties under the new law, and their main purposes now are the hiring and firing of a school superintendent, approve the school budget, and to set goals and policies for the school department. A superintendent may request the hiring of assistant superintendents. A school may disagree with hiring assistants, but consent "will not be unreasonably withheld."

The school committee, attorney Stonberg said, will now act more like a board of directors, and the school superintendent will act as the chief executive officer.

Principals & Teachers
Principals for each school will be hired exclusively by the superintendent of schools, at pay levels set by the school committee.

The principals of the individual schools are charged with hiring and firing teachers and administrative aides and other employees, in conjunction with the superintendent of schools and within the restrictions on budget and policy as set by the school committee. Principals may not organize into collective labor unions, but Tewksbury Principal William DeGregorio questions the legality of organizing for assistant principals and department heads.

Teacher tenure is replaced with a "professional teacher" status, which Arbitrators must consider the best interests of the students and the need to elevate performance standards. Superintendents may reduce teachers to part-time status from full-time status because of decline in enrollment, budgetary reasons or academic reorganization.

Current labor contracts will run for three years maximum, and the chief administrator of the town (the Town Manager, in Tewksbury's case) will become a voting member of the school committee when new labor contracts are negotiated.

School Council
Each individual school must set up a "school council" for purposes of developing a school improvement plan. Each council will be co-chaired by the principal of that school, and comprises an equal number of parents and faculty, and a student member (at the high school level). The council may also include labor, business, municipal government, human services and any other interested groups that the principal may desire. Principals are tasked with defining the make-up of the school council, with approval of the superintendent and the school committee.

The school council helps identify the educational needs of students in that school, review the school budget, and assist in the formulation of a school improvement plan. The school committee may grant more responsibility for education policy to the council, if desired.

Each school's improvement plan is reviewed annually by the school committee, and the plan must set down educational goals and develop plans to improve student performance.

Also, the plan drawn up by the school council must include an assessment of the impact of class size, professional development of faculty members, allocation of professional development funds from the annual budget, enhance parental involvement in the school, develop a plan for meeting diverse learning needs, and develop an integrative special needs model.

For example, a student handbook is the duty of the school council.

The school council must hold its first meeting within 40 days of the start of the school year, and all such meetings are subject to the open meeting law.

And furthermore...
Smoking, under the new law is prohibited in school buildings and on the grounds, buses and facilities. Student discipline is emphasized, to include expulsion. Principals are tasked with student expulsions with appeals to the superintendent.

The school committee must hold a public hearing on "school choice" and the committee may only vote to not participate. A transportation component may be included, if the transportation is funded.

"Our Service Speaks Louder Than Words"

A great many banks tell you lots of things which you may find somewhat confusing when you're trying to finance your home. It's almost as if they don't want you to understand what happens during the mortgage process.

That's where we're different! We figure the more you know about financing your home, the more you'll want to do business with us. We spell things out in plain English.

When you're ready for a home loan, call the bank that does mortgages best...

ARE THEY HOME ALONE?

Remember These Keys To Safety

Here are some very important things you should make sure your kids keep in mind when they're home without you.

1. Keep all the doors and windows locked.
2. Don't let them open the door for just any one! The only people allowed in are those that you say are OK.
3. They should know how to use the telephone and know where the list of emergency numbers is kept (fire department, police, doctor, etc.).
4. When answering the phone in your absence, children should never tell the person on the other end that you are not home. They should say that you're too busy to come to the phone.
5. Be sure your kids know your proper names, not just "Mommy" and "Daddy," in case they have to reach you.
6. Your children should know their own address and telephone number, in case of emergency.
7. They should have a key to the house, or know where there is a spare one. They should know how the locks work, and be able to unlock them in case of emergency.

The Senior Dance Co. placed in the top five high scoring groups out of over 500 entries. The students' achievements include "Special Judges Awards" recipients, pageant title holders, models for fashion shows, Nutcracker ballet performers, and finalists for Dave Maynard's Talent Showcase. The T.D.C. Dance Companies also performed and brought smiles to the faces of those at Wingate at Andover Nursing Home, The Tewksbury Senior Center Annual Cookout, and they've also performed to raise money for muscular dystrophy at TMI.

Ms. Ivers-Aspell is a member of Dance Masters of America Chapter #5, the Dance Teachers Club of Boston, Inc. w/American Society, and a graduate of their three-year teacher training program is certified by "test to teach." ## Teach Your Children, "School is Important"

As a parent, you will always play an important role in your child's development. With each new stage your child reaches, the support and help you provide should change.

Research has shown that parents of children who become successful students do two things: they are involved in school programs and they monitor their children's progress in school. These actions indicate to children that their parents are concerned about and value school achievement. Through action, not just words, these parents reinforce the idea that school is important.

Being involved in school activities helps. It is important to meet children's teachers and let them know that you want to participate in your child's educational process and would like to be informed if anything of concern should develop.

Remember... homework is your children's responsibility.

If the school offers orientation meetings at the beginning of the school year, attend. Go to school and observe your children's classes. Serve as class parent and go on field trips with the class. Even if you do this only once a year, it will make an impression on your children. Participate in the parent-teacher organizations.

Day to day, parents should support the school program. Review your children's homework, ask about projects, and help your children structure time.

Coaching is the most useful way to help your child with homework. The focus in coaching is on accomplishing the homework, not on tutoring or remediation.

Let your children talk through the assignment. Let them explain what they think needs to be done, what the answers are, and how they arrived at those answers. When they aren't clear, or you don't understand, ask them to explain further.

In coaching, you do not do the assignment, you guide your children along, helping them to develop a clear understanding.

Assignments will vary in complexity and length. Often children of any age will be asked to do a long-term project that will be too much work for one night.

Children need to be taught the planning skills that will enable them to manage long term work successfully. Parents can help them think through how to break a large task into manageable smaller tasks.

Don't do it for your children. Instead, talk about what has to be done and how it might be done. Make lists of smaller tasks that will be tackled at each step, and when they should be completed.

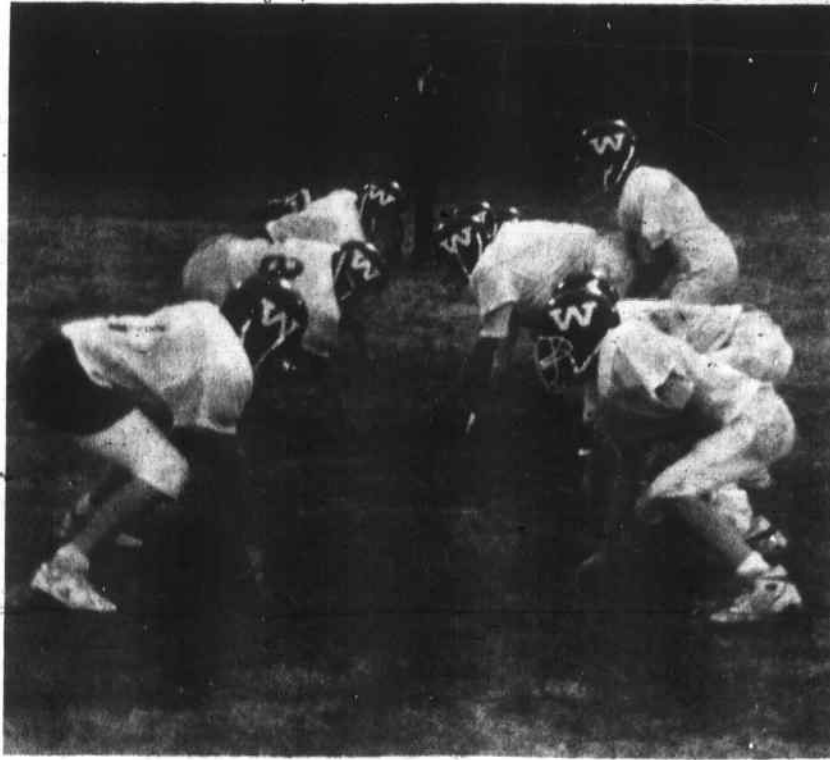

This will help your children structure what needs to be done and helps them learn how to organize for future assignments.

If you find that your child studies only the night before the test, you might suggest a brief study period each evening in addition to any written homework assignments. This will be easy if you have already established a scheduled study time. This may ultimately make the difference between success and failure.

Remember that homework is your children's responsibility. If you find yourself doing your children's homework for them or helping with much of their homework, something is wrong. Talk it over with your children, and if necessary with their teachers. Part of what students should learn from homework is to organize their time and to work efficiently without an adult's supervision.

But even motivated learners who pay attention to their schoolwork may continue to have difficulty. This could be an indication of weakness in basic skills.

Parents who have questions or who wish to discuss specific problems are encouraged to contact the Huntington Learning Center in Methuen at (508) 689-8400 or Chelmsford at (508) 256-3600.

That Healthy Smile

Another school year will begin soon. One of the most valuable things a child can take to school, the Mass. Dental Society reminds us, is a healthy, attractive smile. Stained teeth, tartar buildup, or bad breath can make many aspects of school life difficult for a child.

To ensure the kids in your life start the school year off right, consider these oral health tips:

*Give your child a toothbrush and toothpaste to keep in his or her locker, gym bag, or purse. Encourage your child to brush or at least rinse after every meal.

*Provide school snacks that are good for teeth, such as nuts, popcorn, cheese, lean meats, raw vegetables, plain yogurt, and sugarless gum or candy. If you have older children, educate and encourage them to make these healthy choices on their own.

*If your child plays a sport with the potential for serious face or head injury, be sure he or she wears a custom fitted mouthguard.

*Be alert for gum disease if you have teens in your family. During the teen years especially, gums can be sensitive to the toxins in plaque and are more likely to become inflamed.

*Schedule back-to-school dental checkups for your children and make sure they see the dentists regularly throughout the year to keep their healthy smiles.

Dental Health briefs

Well over two million Americans may have smell or taste problems, according to the Mass. Dental Society. These disorders often are first detected during a visit to the dentist. Serious problems may be seen in older adults. Sudden changes in taste or smell should be investigated thoroughly.

Dairy products: a critical component in dental health

Dairy products play a valuable role in maintaining good oral health because they are the chief source of calcium in the American diet, says the Mass. Dental Society.

Essential to dental health at all stages of life, calcium builds strong bones, decay resistant teeth, and healthy gums. Unfortunately, the average person's diet lacks calcium, and scientific studies have linked low calcium intake over long periods to jawbone loss.

Tribute to his dad

Skate to the Cape

By KEN MAGUIRE

After the death of his father, John Merry knew that one day he would do something to honor him and keep his spirit alive, but he wasn't sure exactly what that something would be.

His dad, William "Brad" Merry, was a popular businessman in his family's hometown of Wakefield. Mr. Merry also loved the game of hockey and felt strongly that he remain active in his community, even after lung cancer claimed his life 18 months ago.

John Merry, 30, has been a hockey player most of his life. The youngest of five children, he spent some time figuring out how to encompass his father's values and wishes. One day not too long ago, it came to him.

"I had just started roller blading," John explained. "It came to me then. There's a definite connection (to hockey). It's somewhat unique, and I thought it would generate some interest."

The result is the "Skate to the Cape." That's right, Cape Cod, on in-line skates - those skates with little wheels which are quickly becoming just as popular as jogging or cycling. In place of an air-conditioned 90-minute drive will be muscle, sweat, and determination.

The "Skate" is set for Sunday, September 12. Departure is 5 a.m. from Wakefield Square and estimated arrival time in Falmouth is anywhere from five to seven o'clock in the evening, assuming all goes well on the 100 mile plus journey.

The catch is that all the money raised for the event will go to good causes. The William B. Merry, Jr. CSF Hockey Scholarship will receive half of the donations, with the other half going to the American Cancer Society. Brad Merry was a firm believer in a college education, and wanted to leave something for others.

The "Skate" will accomplish several goals, most importantly raising public awareness for cancer. And especially lung cancer, which John described as a "very agonizing death and very dehumanizing." Plus, the funds raised in his dad's name will keep his contribution alive despite his passing.

"He wanted us to establish the scholarship for him, so that he could continue to play a role in the community," John said.

Brad Merry was always active in the community and even more so in Wakefield youth hockey. As an architectural engineer in the early 1970s, he left a good job in Boston to strike out on his own in Wakefield. He succeeded, founding an architectural firm. That was before lung cancer slowly got the better of him. He died on February 23, 1992.

Doctors said the cancer was most likely the result of exposure to asbestos, in the early days, before anyone knew it was a health hazard. John explained how easy it was to inhale the asbestos dust back then.

"On job sites when he was younger, they used to cut asbestos board like it was plywood," he said. "The dust was everywhere."

Barring terrible weather on the 12th, the "Skate to the Cape" will go off as planned. The final detail to be worked out at this point is how to get to Brookline, where a recognized bike route to the Cape begins. Merry has two options: First is Rte. 28 through Stoneham, Medford, and Somerville. Next is Main Street through Wakefield, Melrose, Malden, and Everett.

The main goal early on is to reach the Charles River bike path, which begins near McGrath/O'Brien Highway by Storrow Drive. Right now, he is leaning toward the Rte. 28 option, but he plans on skating both routes before next week to make the final determination.

From the Charles River, Merry plans on going through Boston to meet up with the bike route in Brookline. And then comes the South Shore. He'll wind up at the Sagamore Bridge, where he will make a sharp right and head southward to the Bourne Bridge. Woods Hole Golf Course in Falmouth is the finish line. John's parents were planning on retiring in Falmouth.

"I'm in the process right now of trying to get an okay to skate over the Bourne Bridge," Merry said. "I think that would be a nice way to officially get on the Cape, as opposed to walking it." Once in Falmouth, police there will escort him to the finish line.

Over 100 miles is quite a journey, even for an athlete in top form, which Merry is striving for at present. For this past week, and right up to the event, he is skating 50 miles every

Free Hunter Education course

Massachusetts Hunter Education Instructors will hold a Basic Hunter Education Course at the Danvers Fish & Game Club, Log Bridge Road, in Middleton. This course is free to the general public. Students must attend every session.

Instruction will take place on September 11, 18, 25 and October 2. Classes will run from 8 a.m.

to noon. Adults, as well as younger men and women, are encouraged to attend. A State Hunter Education Certificate is provided to course graduates, 14 years or older. Youngster, ages 10-14, may participate and request a "Letter of Completion" to meet out-of-state licensing requirements. Parental permission is required of all students under 18 years of age.

Each year state instructors and Massachusetts Environmental Police hold over 100 hunter education courses throughout the state. The state certificate issued at these classes serves two legal purposes.

First, this card allows young men and women between 15 and 18 years old to hunt alone on their first Massachusetts hunting license.

Secondly, the certificate is frequently necessary for either adults or minors to purchase a hunting license from other U.S. states and Canadian provinces.

All states in the northeast have such requirements, except for Massachusetts. Many experienced hunters participate to qualify for out-of-state licenses.

For additional information on courses, write Hunter Education, P.O. Box 408, Westminster, MA 01473 or call the program office at (508) 792-7434.

About the Towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

MALDEN COPS ARE BEAT

In an effort to increase police presence in Malden Square, the City of Malden has assigned a "beat cop" there, five days a week at times not to be announced - and he is: nine-year Malden police veteran Douglas "Doug" Eisnor.

Mayor Edwin C. Lucey created the position - "one more step in a larger strategy this administration has to revitalize the Square" - to address the concerns of downtown merchants about vandalism and groups of youths and vagrants congregating in front of their establishments.

According to the Malden "Daily News," a $30,000 federal Community Development Block Grant, administered by the Malden Redevelopment Authority on behalf of the City, is paying the majority of Eisnor's salary. According to MRA Executive Director Stephen M. Wishoski, national retail studies emphasize the importance of downtown security as an incentive for shoppers to frequent an area.

Also on foot patrol is Malden Police Patrolman Allan Ray who covers the Newland Street housing projects.

And in more upbeat news: thanks to Christine Proctor, a Lucey aide, the state Committee on Criminal Justice has awarded a $175,000 federal grant to the City to boost police efforts in and around Malden High and the Newland Street area. The grant will provide outreach, drug education and recreation projects in the neighborhoods around Malden middle and high schools.

GET YOUR SOUVENIRS OF READING BEFORE THE CHRISTMAS RUSH - People have been seen standing in line in Reading waiting for the 350th Shop to open so they could purchase just the right village souvenir for that someone special.

The 350th mug has been seen in England, Poland, Scotland, and even Woburn, thanks to its value as "the perfect hostess gift." The sweatshirt - high quality and amply sized - is turning up everywhere. And many, many more than three wise persons have already ordered "At Wood End," a unique historical picture book destined for many coffee tables this Christmas.

If you love to be surrounded by mugs, sweatshirts, book orders, and past, present and future Readingites, consider volunteering your time in the 350th Shop. Open on the second and fourth Saturdays of each month, it is located in a former taxi stand on Haven Street across from the free-coffee-sometimes Atlantic Market.

If Saturday openings do not suit your work schedule, perhaps other times could be arranged. For more information on the many volunteer committees making up the flexible and friendly 350th Committee, call Mary Williams at (617) 944-8291.

STONEHAM RECYCLING: A MATTER OF WASTE 'N' TIME - Discussions on the institution of curbside recycling in Stoneham will take place this month. Again.

Since 1990, the town's Solid Waste Advisory Committee has appeared before the Selectmen with a plan to establish curbside recycling - and the Selectmen have rejected the plan each time, claiming, according to the "Stoneham Independent," that the plan is not cost effective.

The Solid Waste Committee proposes that curbside recycling be implemented in conjunction with a $28 annual fee for Stoneham's single and two-family households; the fee to be included on water and sewer bills and paid quarterly.

Skate to the Cape

other day, in addition to working as a marketing representative for Winchester Imaging Center in Woburn.

His gear is simple. A helmet, elbow and knee pads, hard plastic wrist guards for tumblers, and the skates, provided by Bauer. The skates from Bauer, just received this week, have five wheels (one more than normal), which are designed to be better for long distances and to provide more speed.

But even though the equipment is light, the long journeys take their toll.

"There are pressure points on your skates and after a while it feels like someone is sticking a knife in your foot," Merry said. "Your kneecaps get real sore too."

If things become too hairy or an unfortunate injury threatens the completion of the event, Merry has help along the way. There will be two vehicles riding with him from the start. His brother and brother-in-law, who is a volunteer EMT, will be driving. Enterprise Rent-A-Car has donated a minivan for the day.

The drivers are of substantial benefit. Moral support cannot be underestimated, not to mention food and water, both of which will be consumed in large amounts throughout the day. In addition, one car will be used as a brake for steep downgrades, as in-line skates are not designed for quick stops.

During safe stretches of roadway, Merry's nephew, Dave Merry, Jr., a seven-year-old hockey player from Westford, may join him to push out a few miles. Brother-in-law Jack MacDonald may do the same at some points. Family has always been important to Merry.

"They've all chipped in, in various ways," he said. "They thought it was a good idea to do something, but not necessarily strap on the skates and head to the Cape. My mother was certainly apprehensive. She's coming around a little bit. She's still very concerned but she's definitely supportive."

Merry is not too concerned with injury right now, in fact he is quite confident. "I know I can finish," he said. "It's for a great cause. It's in memory of my father."

It's that same memory that has propelled the fundraising drive in Wakefield. People who knew Brad Merry were excited to contribute to the event. Last Saturday, John and his siblings set up a table in the town's square to seek support. They were thrilled with the response.

"The fundraising has gone extremely well," John said. "It's a tribute to my father, too. He was well-liked and respected. He was a great father, a great architect, and he was an honest businessman, and people responded to that. It makes you feel good. I'm overwhelmed by it and I'm very grateful to everyone who has helped."

Merry has a goal of raising between seven and eight thousand dollars for the Skate. He said there "is still a long way to go, but it might be attainable."

He is quick to point out that the business community has been helpful. In addition to the skates and the minivan, his employer and the Wakefield Rotary Club are making financial donations. Nebs Printing made up free posters, Image Design provided "Skate to the Cape" tee shirts, while the Ski and Sports Shack and Play It Again Sports have helped too.

Merry has used a personal trainer (One to One) to help prepare as well. He is staying away from fatty foods, eating lots of pasta, but is still losing weight. "Basically, I'm eating like a pig, but I'm just burning so many calories. I've been working out hard for 10 years, and it's good that now I can put this to good use."

Not that he needed more motivation, but as a former hockey goalie, he "wants to put to rest the myth that goalies can't skate."

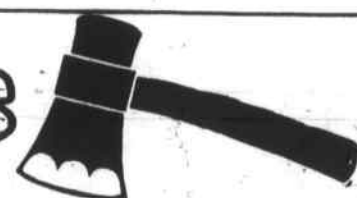

For himself, John is pumped up and ready to go, but he is also excited that his actions may create awareness among others.

"Hopefully something like this will inspire other people to play an active role. It's easy to put it off, I certainly have, but it's nice to be able to make a contribution."

Anyone wishing to make donations can make a check payable to (and mail to) "Skate to the Cape," P.O. Box 59, Wakefield, MA 01880. (The Wakefield Co-operative Bank holds the account.)

ANTHONY MANCONI

George Gould experienced a remarkable improvement in his hearing after taking a new medicine. The maker of this elixir asked George for a testimonial. George obliged saying, "I was afraid I was getting deaf but, after taking your product for two weeks, I heard from my brother in California."

Folks, God can do wonders with a broken heart if you give Him all the pieces... I hate wedding ceremonies (they remind me of my own) but I sure love the receptions. Last week at my cousin Diane's wedding reception I went up to the head table for the third time for ice cream and cake. "Why you blooming idiot!" Kathy shouted when I returned to my table. "You are making a fool of yourself; have you no pride? I suppose you are nutty enough to go for 'more' ice cream and cake." I smiled and replied, "It doesn't bother me, dear. I keep telling them that I'm getting the ice cream and cake for you!"

Charisma is hard to define but it's recognized instantly. These are a few of the "many" people I know who are blessed with it: Mary Carpenter, Woburn; Mae Holland, Winchester; Mary Venezia, Burlington; Robert Brennan, Wakefield; Jim McCarthy, Stoneham; Eugene Nigro, Reading; Hugh Wiberg, Wilmington; Patricia Millward, Tewksbury; Jimmy Geary, Lynnfield; Margaret Strangie, North Reading; Bill Mini, Malden.; Fr. Dennis Nason, Medford; Gerry Kaestner, Melrose; Marty McDonough, Everett; Mario Cutone, Arlington; Robert Publicover, Somerville and many more at another time.

Girls, advice from the Woodchipper - "Never trust a man who doesn't brag. Anyone who doesn't 'toot' his own horn may have a 'dead battery'!"... Paul Simon of Stoneham went to the post office complaining about receiving threatening letters. "It's against the law, Mr. Simon. Who has been sending those letters to you?" "The electric company, the gas company and the telephone company."

Officer Gately was dispatched to investigate a nudist colony in Woburn. He was advised to use caution if a "pinch" was necessary.

PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA HAS OPENINGS

The Lowell Philharmonic Orchestra, under the musical direction of David Hill Bailey, is announcing immediate openings for the 1993-94 season. Rehearsals will begin September 7 and are every Tuesday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. In the past, the orchestra has rehearsed at the U-Mass at Lowell's Durgin Hall (formerly University of Lowell) and at the Campbell school in Dracut. Programming this year will include Beethoven's "Symphony #2," "Cello Concerto #1 in C" by Hayden featuring Mary Alice McCann, "Fingal's Cave Overture" by Mendelssohn, "Violin Concerto in E minor" by Mendelssohn featuring Alison Bailey, a performance with the Chelmsford Congregational Church Choir under the direction of David Sears, and a mid-winter family concert featuring the winner of the orchestras' annual Jeanne Selander Memorial Concerto Competition.

Music Director Bailey says that this will be a very exciting year for the Lowell Philharmonic Orchestra and urges all interested musicians to contact him as soon as possible.

The Harriet Hootor Ballet School

442 Main Street, Woburn Mary B. Vasek, Director

IS READY TO DANCE INTO ITS 43rd SEASON!!

The Harriet Hootor Ballet School is NOT A "DANCE RECREATION" SCHOOL which spends students' class time and money on rehearsals & expensive costumes. Our alternative to recitals is tastefully done class & dance demonstrations to give families the opportunity to see their dancer at the end of the year. In this way, during most of the dance year, our efforts are directed toward building a secure foundation in ballet technique and improving skills. Whether a serious dancer or a student who dances to help other talents, or just for grace, poise and enjoyment, each and every one of our students are important to us. The development & achievement of many of our students over the years has earned our school a very fine reputation.

School Notes

EVERETT STUDENTS GO FOR SALAD IN A HANDS-ON WAY - Peggy Serino's Hale School second - now third - graders participated recently in "Bottle Biology," a hands-on independent research program in which they observed and experimented with plants they grew themselves.

Designed by the National Gardening Association in conjunction with the National Science Foundation, the program is part of Everett's new nationally award-winning science program which ranges from pre-kindergarten through grade 12 and which was developed by Frank O'Connell, grade pre-K through eight science coordinator; Jim Micarelli, department head; and Richard Wallace, mathematics director.

The program, according to Everett Superintendent of Schools Foresteire in the "Daily News-Mercury," provides students with a learning experience that incorporates all subjects and offers an "interesting, yet entertaining approach to science which capitalizes on the natural curiosity of children."

The second grade unit culminated in a harvesting of crops which turned into a gourmet traditional costumes. King Ludwig's Bavarian Band and the Nordkuste Musikanten will play lively tunes. A Strolling Musician will assist with sing alongs. Listen to the band playing: Ein Prosit, ein Prosit der Gemutlichkeit!

salad enjoyed by members of the faculty and Hale Principal Robert Sansone.

Participants in the research project include Shannon Gotto, Marirose Lynch, Susanne Puopolo, Mark DeYeso, Matthew MacDonald, Megan Browne, Jenna Schiavo, Anthony Cataldo, Nicole Young, Jenna Davis, Thomas Baldassari, Kristin Berner, David Murnane, Adam Arsenault, Adele McCabe, Craig Galbraith, and Muriel St. Louis.

Word is they enjoyed dressing for the occasion and turning over a new leaf.

NORTH READING SCHOOL YEAR BEGINS ON FRESH-EST NOTE EVER AS SEVERAL TEACHERS LEAVE THE HOOD - According to North Reading Superintendent of Schools Dr. Francis X. O'Donoghue in the North Reading "Transcript," at least a dozen new teachers are joining the North Reading teacher ranks this year, more than in any other single year he can remember.

Teachers most recently announcing plans to retire as of the start of school this year are Lawrence F. O'Brien, who taught second grade at the Hood School for 20 years and Vivi Ann Vorillas, a 30-year veteran of the Hood. Four other teachers with retirement on the agenda and service to North Reading totaling more than 100 years are Hood teachers Ruth Goldberg and Anna Reel, and high school teachers Harold Weiss and Jerry Donovan.

Of course, the final count - in Everytown - depends on the state's Early Retirement Incentive Program. Stay tuned.

LYNNFIELD BUS DISCUSSIONS GO ROUND AND ROUND - "As at meetings in the past, the discussion of busing again opened the whole can of worms," reports the "Lynnfield Villager" in an article announcing that this year's busing policy is now in place with no tires or time to spare.

"School Committee members rehashed every option," notes the "Villager," "and the downfalls to each, all to the incessant squeaking of a ceiling fan in the High School Cafeteria."

At this point, only students in grades K-6 who live more than two miles from school or in four designated safety areas will be provided bus transportation.

Some discussion revolved around how to define safety areas; how to limit them to four; and whether or not to add them to the state's fairly definitive two-mile mandate.

BURLINGTON ENVIRONMENT ALREADY ENRICHED - Several Marshall Simonds middle school students participated during the summer in a four-week enrichment program which culminated with a conference on "Ecology and the Environment."

READING STUDENT PLACES IN CITIZEN BEE AND LEAVES TOWN - Michael Shannon, a member of the Reading High Class of '93, placed among the top 20 in the National Citizen Bee in Washington, DC. While he was in DC, he met with Congressman Ed Markey; and while he was in August, he took off for his freshman year at Rice University.

If you'd like to read about your favorite school, student or teacher in "School Notes," please send school newsletters and other relevant information to Phyllis Nissen, "School Notes," Middlesex East Supplement, Box 240, Reading, MA 01867.

NRTW auditions for "Fiddler"

The North Reading Theatre Workshop is holding open auditions for Fiddler on the Roof in early September. This is a large cast musical, with many speaking and singing roles and many chorus numbers. There are plenty of familiar songs, including, "If I Were a Rich Man," "Matchmaker, Matchmaker," "Do You Love Me?" and "Sabbath Prayer."

In addition to adult lead and supporting roles, and large chorus, at least four children are being sought - two girls and two boys. The girls are Tevye's youngest daughters, aged 6-12, and will be in several scenes, as well as in chorus numbers. The boys will be in most of the chorus numbers and should be the same age range as the girls.

The story of Fiddler on the Roof follows Tevye, a milkman, and his family in Anatevka in Russia before the revolution.

Many things change for Tevye, his family and his village. Long-held traditions are challenged - some are altered and some stand.

As the story unfolds, every aspect of Russian village life is portrayed - the working man, his aspirations for his family, the struggles of being a Jew at that time. All roles are available, including Tevye, Golde and their five daughters, Yenta (the matchmaker), Lazar Wolf (the Butcher), and many, many more.

While auditions and rehearsals will be in North Reading, Fiddler on the Roof will be performed in November at Wilmington High School Auditorium.

Auditions for Fiddler on the Roof will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, September 1 and 2 at 7 p.m. for all adult roles and chorus. Children, ages 6-12, should come on Wednesday or Thursday at 6 p.m. Anyone auditioning for specific roles should be prepared to sing something from the show. Auditions will be held at the Union Congregational Church, Haverhill Street, North Reading. Please call Paul Greene at (508) 681-0355 for more information.

Polymnia opens 1993-94 season

Singers, especially basses and tenors, are welcome to attend open rehearsals for the Polymnia Choral Society as it begins its 1993-94 season. The two open rehearsals will be held on Tuesday, September 7 and 14, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the Unitarian Universalist Church in Melrose on West Emerson Street, across the street from the Melrose Library.

The 60-voice chorus, directed by James Reyes, Assistant Professor of Composition at Berklee College of Music, is composed of singers from Melrose and many surrounding towns. Rehearsals begin for its December holiday concert with a program including "Amahl and the Night Visitors," two choruses from Handel's "Messiah," Franz Schubert's "Magnificat in C major," and some traditional Christmas Carols.

For more information, please call (617) 662-8514, or write to Polymnia Choral Society, P.O. Box 82, Melrose, MA 02176.

"Manhattan Murder Mystery" Short Takes

by Rochelle Flynn

"Manhattan Murder Mystery" Starring Woody Allen, Diane Keaton, Jerry Adler, Alan Alda, Anjelica Huston. Directed by Woody Allen. Written by Allen and Marshall Brickman. Produced by Robert Greenhut. Rated PG.

He's back. Before the Farrow Fallout and art house angst, Woody Allen made funny, breezy, frenetic, chatty, neurotic movies. "Manhattan Murder Mystery" is all of those things and more.

Allen plays Larry Lipton, an uptight editor married to Carol (Diane Keaton) a would be restaurateur. Keaton, who replaced Mia Farrow at the last moment, is a woman who may be having a mid-life crisis by looking for drama where there isn't any. Or she is correct and their neighbor isn't grieving his recently deceased wife because he did, in fact, kill her.

At first, the Liptons find their neighbors, Paul and Lillian House (Jerry Adler, Lynn Cohen) to be utterly unremarkable. But when seemingly healthy Lillian drops dead of a heart attack, and Paul appears a little too upbeat, the chase is on for Carol. This usually careful woman begins tailing her neighbor, searching for clues and in, short, behaving completely crazy.

The plot is complicated, but fun. It also owes a lot of its success to old movies. It's not by accident that the Liptons watch "Double Indemnity" at an old art house. Later, Orson Welles' weird film noir "The Lady from Shanghai," plays a prominent role.

As the Liptons become more and more entrenched in a murder that may or may not have happened, their marriage starts to buckle under the strain. Do they need more excitement? How attracted is Carol to a recently divorced pal (Alan Alda) who is sort of putting the move on her? And Allen is particularly funny when his nervousness becomes pathological once writer Angelica Huston shows some interest in him sexually.

Everyone in the cast is a little off center. More than eccentric but grounded just enough not to be silly, these people are flawed, smart and engaging. Having watched too many movies, Carol leads a mad chase through Manhattan, digging for clues that would only draw guffaws from the boys in blue.

Nothing too deep here, and nothing too memorable, but this flick is exactly what Allen needed to counteract all that ugly press. Fast and fun, it is a great big ball of nervous, yet intelligent energy.

Short Takes

The Secret Garden is the best, most magical adaptation to date of Frances Hodgson Burnett's delightful children's book. Kate Maberly is the spoiled orphan shipped to England as the ward of a cold uncle who runs a strange, unhappy household. Digging in a locked up garden, Mary begins a healing process that reunited her dysfunctional, somewhat twisted family with each other and reality. Quite beautifully made. Rated G. ***1/2

Hearts and Souls is designed to tug at your heartstrings as four guardian angel types fulfill their last mortal wishes while trying to teach crusty businessman Robert Downey, Jr. not to be so emotionally uptight. Those of you who don't like sap in their cinema should consider themselves warned. The rest of us will be delightfully giggling and dabbing at our eyes. Rated PG-13. ***

The Fugitive is THE movie to see this summer. It's an engrossing, edge-of-your-seat, heart-pumper of a flick with some of the best action and chase scenes ever captured on film. Harrison Ford plays a celebrated surgeon arrested for the brutal murder of his wife (Sela Ford). After a daring escape, he spends most of the movie trying to elude a U.S. Marshall (Tommy Lee Jones) who is every bit as clever and tenacious as Ford. Great fun. Rated PG-13. ****

The Meteor Man stars Robert Townsend as a former underdog who is zapped by a meteor and discovers he has superhuman abilities, which he puts to good use as a community activist. Though a great choice for kids, writer/director Townsend's endless messages dilute the film's wonderful comic book sensibilities. Rated PG. ** 1/2

Sleepless in Seattle is an intelligent, witty story that unabashedly embraces the idea of destiny and makes us believe in the magic of movies. Meg Ryan is an engaged woman who falls for Tom Hanks after hearing him on a national talk radio show. Nora Ephron's clever direction keeps the plot alive without it getting far-fetched, but the real reason this film clicks is all in the chemistry. Ephron collected a cast that could really make us accept the power of love, even when it doesn't make sense. Rated PG. ****

Rising Sun stars Wesley Snipes as a Los Angeles detective caught up in the murder of a woman involved with a powerful Japanese businessman. Sean Connery is the expert in Japanese affairs called in to assist. Nothing is what it appears on the surface, including this flick, which is noticeably lacking in depth. Rated R. ** 1/2

The Firm stars Tom Cruise as a young lawyer who sells his soul to the company store, only to learn he's working for the Mafia. Though there is plenty of excitement in this flick, as well as a boffo supporting cast, it's bloated at about 2 hours and 45 minutes. Still, it provides an intriguing look at the rotten core of an American dream. Rated R. ***

In the Line of Fire is a thriller about a very smart, extremely cruel assassin (John Malkovich) who plans to land in the Criminal Hall of Fame by putting a bullet into the president. Clint Eastwood is the steely, uncompromising Secret Service agent with other ideas. Strong characterizations and lasting psychological profiles, clearly defined by both the script and the performances, make this a taut, memorable drama. Rated R. *** 1/2

What's Love Got To Do With It? stars Angela Bassett as Tina Turner and Laurence Fishburne as Ike Turner, her Svengali husband/manager. Kudos to the filmmakers for not shrinking away from the abuse Ike heaped upon Tina as she outgrew him artistically and emotionally.

DIANE KEATON AND WOODY ALLEN in a scene from "Manhattan Murder Mystery," a TriStar Pictures release.

Fishburne is all coiled intensity as he stares through Bassett, whose fiery impersonation of Tina is right on the money. Rated R. ****

Jurassic Park is the ultimate movie in every sense of the word. Resurrected dinosaurs both enchant and terrify the first visitors to a newly developed theme park. It doesn't matter that the dinos are the only stars here and the people are barely fleshed out, because the special effects will keep you on the edge of your seat. But director Steven Spielberg eradicated the cynicism of Michael Crichton's book, so the fun tends to be more visual than emotional. And it's too violent for children under the age of 10. Rated PG-13. ****1/2

Much Ado About Nothing is an amusing adaptation of Shakespeare's biting tale of deception and true love. Director/adaptor Kenneth Branagh and wife Emma Thompson are the wise and witty lovers at the core of this gorgeously photographed romance. Minus a couple of points for Michael Keaton's strange performance and Keanu Reeves general lack of talent for anything but posturing, this is nonetheless a brilliant and beautiful film. Rated PG-13. ****

Like Water for Chocolate is a magical, Mexican film about a kind-hearted woman whose cooking reflects the passions she bottles up inside for a man she cannot marry. The story juggles wisdom and humor while rejoicing in the recuperative powers of women. Rarely is passion so artfully translated onto the screen. Rated R. ***

**** excellent *** good ** fair * poor

"Wellness Plus" health course

The Center for Plastic Surgery and Personal Development has announced the introduction of "Wellness Plus" an innovative, comprehensive approach to holistic health.

"Wellness Plus," a physician-directed program is specifically designed to enhance one's quality of life while preventing disease and disability. The resulting fitness of body and mind helps the individual to attain a high level of health and well-being.

Through a thorough evaluation of a person's current stress level, nutritional awareness, fitness profile, coronary risk analysis, and body fat ratio, "Wellness Plus" provides the individual with a personalized wellness action plan.

Gurmander S. Kohli, M.D., founder and medical director of The Center for Plastic Surgery and Personal Development, sees "Wellness Plus" as a natural extension of The Center's philosophy of blending sophisticated medical, health, and self-improvement services.

Wellness, according to Dr. Kohli, "involves choices in the social, emotional, and physical aspects of our lives. When these three dimensions exist harmoniously, we have a solid foundation for optimal well-being. To borrow the words of Hippocrates, I strongly believe that 'the natural healing force within each one of us is the greatest force in staying well,'" added Dr. Kohli.

"Wellness Plus" will be administered by Swarn Goswami, M.D. During the past 15 years, Dr. Goswami has developed health and wellness programs in diverse environments and has counseled hundreds of individuals in implementing their wellness objectives.

According to Dr. Goswami, wellness involves personal choice. "Good health is not an accident, but largely the result of daily lifestyle decisions regarding eating, exercise, smoking, and our mental attitude - all of which have a profound effect on the degree of health that we can enjoy."

Located in Stoneham, The Center for Plastic Surgery and Personal Development is the first facility in New England to provide a comprehensive approach to mind, body, and appearance. The Center was founded in 1989 by Gurmander S. Kohli, M.D.

In Malden Irish American Road Race

The Malden Irish American Club must be doing something right because every Labor Day this race gathers a larger field of participants and even more spectators. "The whole race committee and over 125 club volunteers work hard to make this a successful event," says Malden Irish American Club President Bill Kelly. Race official and member John Rivers adds, "With the 10K and 5K Course, we increased our entries by 35 percent. With a wheel chair division and five age categories, we expect a field of over 600."

This traditional Labor Day of Irish music, beer, raffles and food is sponsored by Bud Light, Converse Inc., Davidson Chevrolet, Kayem Foods, 10K Thirst Quencher, Pepsi Cola and Poland Spring. This year Domino's Pizza will be available and there'll be a special guest for the kids...their favorite purple dinosaur!

Each year this club makes a donation to the American Lung Association in memory of Club members who have passed away. "I've seen the work the Lung Association provides and this support will enable these programs and services to continue. It's a great day of fun for everyone and it all goes to a good cause," added Rivers.

This year, there's even a Boston Irish connection as Boston City Councilor Albert "Dapper" O'Neil will serve as the official starter and Mayoral candidate Mickey Roache will run in the race.

For race registration information, contact the Malden Irish American Club at (617) 321-7720 or call the American Lung Association at (617) 272-2866.

Red Cross offers instructor training course

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay-Northern Area needs Health Service instructors to teach CPR and First Aid courses at their Peabody and Melrose facilities. Teaching is a great way to prepare new parents, students, care givers, friends and neighbors with the skills and knowledge to save a life.

Needed to take this course is a basic-level certificate, a few hours during the month, and a desire to teach the lifesaving skills you have learned to those who need them.

The Red Cross is offering the following two courses:

At the Peabody facility the course starts Monday, September 13 and continues September 15, 20, 22, 29 from 6 to 10 p.m. each night;

And at the Melrose facility the course starts Monday, October 4 and continues October 6, 13, 18, and 20 from 6 to 10 p.m. each night.

Last year the North Area taught 284 Health Service classes, so people can see how great the need is for more instructors.

For more information about these courses please call the Peabody Red Cross at 1-508-531-2280.

From S-4

Bonnie J. Wayshak, all of MEDFORD.

Mario DiMino of Stoneham told his doctor, "Doc, I don't drink, smoke or swear and I don't chase women, either. Can you tell me how long I can expect to live?" "What for, Mario?" the doctor asked.

George Guyette sat down beside Richie Hamel pushing him up against the window of the bus. "They ought to charge passengers by weight on these buses," Richie shouted. "If they did," George replied, "you would have to walk. It wouldn't pay to stop and pick you up!"... Aunt Nora was trying desperately to get on a bus but the doorway was too narrow. "Why don't you try sideways?" the bus driver suggested. "It's no use!" Aunt Nora exclaimed. "I haven't got any sideways!"

In an army chemical warfare class, Sgt. Paul Simon of Stoneham was asked, "What is the difference between radiation and contamination?" Being brought up on a farm, Paul replied, "Sir, radiation is when I smell horse manure. Contamination is when I step in it."... Kathy and I went out to dinner. She ordered steak and I ordered a fish dinner. When the waiter brought my fish dinner to me I said, "Please tell me why you have your thumb on the fish." "I have to hold it down, sir. I don't want it to slide off the tray and fall on the floor again."

Mario DiMino of Stoneham told the police that while sitting in a neighborhood bar two men came in and hit him over the head with a sack of potatoes.

Officer Kevin Fisher, making out the report, said, "Would you recognize them if you saw them again?" "I sure would, sir," Mario replied, "They were Maine potatoes."

I walked into a plush automobile showroom and the salesman said to me, "This car is yours for a song." I tried singing alto, tenor and bass. The salesman laughed and said, "Chipper, try singing in the $35,000 range."... I bought a car for half the price. It has tapes that tell me if my doors are open, if the gas is low and also, if it's raining, saying

"Put the windshield wipers on, stupid!" It also talks to other cars stopped alongside at traffic lights, saying, "By the Japanese who made you and the Ship Maru that brought you, you're not better car than I am - 'hunka-tin'!"... My Aunt Nora, looking over my shoulder, couldn't stand anymore. She rushed out to the kitchen and shouted to Kathy, "Give me a couple of aspirins, quick."

After a "Fire and Brimstone" sermon, Father Dennis Nason of St. Raphael's Church in Medford said, "All those who want to get to Heaven, stand up!" Everyone jumped up from their seats except one little old gentleman sitting in the first pew. Father Nason went over to him and gently put his arm around the poor soul's shoulder and said, "Don't you want to go to Heaven when you die?" "Oh! When I die!" exclaimed the greatly relieved man. "I thought you were making up a bus load now!"

When I was selling vacuum cleaners my first two orders were "Get out and stay out!" When I got back to the office the sales manager asked me, "How did it go today, Chipper?" "Rotten. I got nothing but insults all day long." "That's funny," he replied, "I've been on the road for 40 years. I've had doors slammed in my face, my samples dumped in the street and tossed down stairs, but insulted - Never!"
